Honorary mention

Wojciech Drelicharz, Ph.D, is the originator of the idea of creating an inventory of the inscriptions and crests in the territory of the Borderlands and editor of a series of publications titled “Monuments of epigraphy and heraldry of the Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth in Ukraine”, which represents the result of his work. He has been connected with the Jagiellonian University since the 1980s, first as a student involved in the scientific community and student opposition structures, and then as an academic at the Institute of History. He has devoted a major part of his life to searching for and researching inscriptions and crests from former Polish territories. For several years, since 1994, he has been going on study trips to the Borderlands with a team of students. He initiated work on and co-edited publications featuring the texts of cemetery inscriptions from numerous Ukrainian localities, such as Chervonohrad or Yahilnytsia. It is primarily thanks to the commitment of professor Drelicharz that we have access to nearly all Polish inscriptions and crests created until 1945 that remain in Ukraine and are located outside cemeteries. The collected documentation is invaluable for preserving knowledge about the Polish heritage of the Borderlands.
