

Institute of National Remembrance

<https://ipn.gov.pl/en/brief-history-of-poland/collected-content/9172,COLLECTED-CONTENT-The-Silesian-Uprisings-1919-1921.html>

25.04.2024, 08:55

11.01.2022

COLLECTED CONTENT: The Silesian Uprisings 1919-1921

The Silesian Uprisings is a common name for a set of three uprisings from August 1919 to July 1921 in Upper Silesia. At the time it was part of the Weimar Republic. Polish-Silesian insurrectionists, seeking to have the area connected to Polish Republic, fought German police and paramilitary forces which sought to keep the area as part of Germany.

25

Aufruf Korfantys am 3. Mai 1921

25

Landsleute!
Es muss jedwed
Spur des preussische Joches
verwunden!

Den Sieg müssen
wir um jeden
Preis erringen
kein Gewalttha
der weit im Sta
die Germanen aufz
zwingen.
(-) Wojciech Korf

Streik
Bewegung
Standort
3. Mai 1921
Verfassung
Korfantys
(-)

Between Paris and London

Global superpowers did not deny themselves the right to decide about the shape and fate of Upper Silesia.

It may seem that Upper Silesia, located on the Polish-German border, would be an area of interest only to those two countries. In the meantime, it turned out that although some politicians in Paris and London could not even point to the region on a map, it had become part of a greater international rivalry.

Read more

Global Press about Upper Silesia

In May 1921, the front pages of newspapers around the world featured headlines about the events in Upper Silesia.

The largest and most widely read press titles participated in the main political games of the powers interested in a favourable outcome to the Upper Silesian conflict.

Read more

Ideas for the Division of Upper Silesia after the Plebiscite

The settlement of the Upper Silesian matter depended on the representatives of the Allied countries.

Contrary to expectations, the plebiscite did not settle the issue of Upper Silesia decisively. The ambiguous results of the vote led both Poles and Germans to interpret them in their favour. As early as 22 March 1921, Wojciech Korfanty, as the Polish Plebiscite Commissioner, issued a proclamation.

Read more

"Everyone and Everything for Upper Silesia"

In the reborn Republic of Poland, interest in the 'Upper Silesian question' was enormous. Everyone and everything for Upper Silesia – this was the motto of 'Upper Silesian Week' organised by the Central Plebiscite Committee in Warsaw at the turn of December 1920 and January 1921.

Read more

Plebiscites in post-Versailles Europe

In most of the territories where plebiscites were held, despite the borders being set out according to their results, political conflicts did not end

Read more

The Upper Silesian plebiscite of 20 March 1921 – the course of voting

Both the Polish and German sides presented the plebiscite as their own success.

Read more

Outbreak of the uprising - first fights victorious for the Polish side

The Third Silesian Uprising was the first of the Silesian insurgencies that was not only agreed upon with representatives of the Polish state, but also received political and military support.

Read more

Wawelberg Destruction Group

Polish diversionary actions had a real influence on the course of military operations.

Read more

Polish forces during the Third Uprising. Numbers, structure, leaders

"From this moment on, you are soldiers" (from W. Korfanty's Manifesto). After the end of the Second Silesian Uprising, the Polish Military Organisation of Upper Silesia was transformed into the Headquarters for Physical Education and then into the Plebiscite Defence Command, formally subordinated to the Polish Plebiscite Commissariat.

Read more

Selbstschutz Oberschlesien – German forces during the Third Uprising

The highest combat value among the German units was represented by the so-called freikorps. The situation of the German side in 1921 was fundamentally different from that of the two previous years. There was no organised armed formation like the Grenzschutz in 1919 and the Sicherheitspolizei a year later.

Read more

Sankt Annaberg and Kandrzin – the largest battles

The fiercest battles were fought near these towns, with the use of armoured trains and cars, as well as artillery. Unlike the 1919 and 1920 uprisings, the Third Silesian Uprising was a military operation with specific military objectives, conducted under the guidance of professional officers. What is more, a front line was formed during its actions.

Read more

Another Ireland? From truce to partition of the region

The border in Upper Silesia was considered the most curious, most difficult and the worst in Europe.

Read more

Other articles related to the Silesian Uprisings:

The unveiling of the plaque commemorating the outbreak of the First Silesian Uprising in Piotrowice near Karviná, 16 August 2019

Poles responded with arms to German terror - the Second Silesian Uprising

The IPN is celebrating the centenary of the outbreak of the Third Silesian Uprising

The opening of the “1919-1921: Silesian Uprisings” exhibition on 20 March in Cracow

The opening of the IPN exhibition "... Either it will be great or it will not exist at all. The fight for Polish borders in the years 1918-1921 "- Warsaw, 26 June 2019

The President of the IPN, Karol Nawrocki, Ph.D. opened the exhibition "The Year 1921 in Upper Silesia" in Katowice on 20 October 2021

Digital exhibition available for download: The Silesian Uprisings 1919-1921

For articles on the topic, download the PDF of the Press Supplement on the Centenary of the Third Silesian Uprising below:

Downloads

CENTENARY_OF_THE_THIRD_SILESIAIAN_UPRISING_-_PRESS_SUPPLEMENT \(pdf, 2.67 MB\)

Opcje strony

- Print this page

- Generate PDF of this page

- Notify about this page

- Share this article

Share on Facebook

Share on Twitter