Adam Pleskaczyński, Time of the Beasts. Terror in Occupied Poland 1939-1945, translated by Agnieszka Małgorzata Hendry, Warsaw 2024, 496 p., ISBN 978-83-8376-163-3

A picture is worth a thousand words. With 1,200 archival photographs, this album is the largest published collection of pictures presenting the facets of German and Soviet terror in the occupied Polish territories during World War II. The selected iconographic material was compiled after analyzing the collections of the Archive of the Institute of National Remembrance and many other institutions in Poland and abroad, consisting of tens of thousands of photographs. Months of meticulous detective work went into identifying and describing the events, places, and people depicted therein. These images, that are not just true but historically representative, take us on a journey to a particularly dark era in European history, to a place where we never want to return.
